Real Diamond.

Can you tell a genuine diamond from an imitation one? Some experts find it hard to tell fakes from real stones, but after the fake stone has been worn for a little time it soon loses its luster. It is this which makes a real diamond valuable. No matter how long it is worn it will keep its sparkle as well as ever.

The real reason for this is the hardness of the diamond. It is not due to any special quality in the stone itself, except its transparency and its hardness.

The sparkle of a diamond depends on the sharpness of the edges and the points of its facets. When the light falls on one of these it is reflected to another facet, lying at a different angle and is refracted again, and so, on, many times. Each time the light is reflected it gives a point of brilliance, and, in most instances, splits up the light so that the red and blue rays are seen.

The imitation stone, to begin with, seldom has as many facets as a diamond. But, even if it had, the sharpness of these edges would wear off. Even exposure to the air will wear away any substance that is not extremely hard. And just as soon as there is any dulling of the edges of a facet, so soon there is a dimming of the brilliance of the stone.

It is evident that there would be little profit in imitation stones if they were as hard as diamonds, for then they would be as much trouble to cut as diamonds are, and, indeed, would have to be ground down by diamond dust.

A $3 imitation stone has just as much sparkle, looks just as well and answers every purpose of a $300 stone, for a time.

On a Fast Train.

Three men were talking in rather a large way as to the excellent train service each had in his special locality. One was from the West, one from New England and the other from New York. Two men had told of marvelous doings of trains, and it was distinctly "up" to the New Yorker.

"Now, in New York," he said, "we not only run our trains fast, but we also start them fast. I remember the case of a friend of mine whose wife went to see him off for the West in the Pennsylvania at Jersey City. As the train was about to start my friend said his final goodby to his wife and leaned down from the car platform to kiss her. The train started, and, would you believe it, my friend found himself kissing a strange woman on the platform of Trenton."

A Pair of Liars.

"Captain," said Private Mulligan, "would yez be givin' me a week's furlough? I want to visit me wife. The poor girl is pinin' for me, and I haven't seen her since I enlisted two years ago."

"No, Mulligan," replied the officer. "I know what you want. You want to go on a drunk. Your wife don't want to see you. She wrote me a week ago asking me not to give you leave of absence. She wrote that just before you enlisted you got drunk and beat her. She has had two years of peace and happiness since you went away. You can't go."

Mulligan saluted and started for the door; there he halted. "Captain," said he, "would you just for once forget that you are an officer and I am a private and allow me to say a few words to you as man to man?"

"Go ahead, Mulligan," replied the Captain, "Free your mind."

"Well, Captain, said Mulligan, 'I beg to remark that you and I are two of the d— liars in the State of California. I have no wife, sir.'—Los Angeles Times.

THE CHILD IS FORGOTTEN

GIVE PEOPLE GREATER POWER

The people of Kentucky are interested, deeply interested, in education, as is shown by the advance made in the last ten years. The people want this development and advancement to be of a strong and lasting type, but this can not be accomplished either rapidly or consistently so long as the school system remains in politics. Every good citizen and parent in the state wants the management of their child's educational advantages divorced from politics.

The Superintendent of Public Instruction is a constitutional officer and must be elected at a regular election of state officers, and he can not succeed himself. To make this a little plainer, it might be well to state that the name Superintendent of Public Instruction is one of the many names on the ballot, and interest in the election is centered, not on him, but upon the head of the ticket. Frequently a state ticket is elected on a big public issue, absolutely foreign to school matters, and the result is the Superintendent of Public Instruction goes into office, not as a school man, but as part of a successful party ticket.

No business could be carried on with thorough success if the general manager knew that at the end of four years he must give up his position to a new and untried man, no matter what progress he was making. This is exactly what the state is now doing with its important business, the business of manufacturing strong citizens out of the raw material of child-life.

It is proposed to amend the Constitution of the state by striking from Sections 91, 93 and 95 of the Constitution the words "Superintendent of the Public Instruction."

The objects to be accomplished by this amendment are to enable the people of this state to take the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction out of politics and to continue in office for a longer period than four years any Superintendent whose conduct of the office is highly efficient.

Under the operation of the Constitution, which compels the election of Superintendent of Public Instruction for a term of four years, and which makes this officer ineligible to succeed himself, the people are prevented from eliminating the office from politics and prohibited from retaining in office an efficient officer.

The public, in urging this change, should bear in mind the fact that even with the quickest action possible under the law this amendment would not be effective until the candidate elected next August will have served his full term, so that no complications or ill feeling need be developed.

Life That is Most Useful.

As a rule, well-rounded lives are many-sided. That is to say, the life that is most useful as well as uplifting is the life that is fullest. It does not require any great degree of initiative and determination to confine ourselves to the pursuit of a single interest, provided, of course, that the interest is satisfying. Its pursuit is natural because it appeals to use and we not only take pleasure in whatever service may be required of us in following out our preferences, but such service soon becomes a matter of course sufficient to blind us to other interests. We may become proficient in a particular way, it is true, but when such proficiency is obtained only through the sacrifice of other opportunities we are narrowing our possibilities to dangerous limitations. Specialization is the keynote of today, but only along progressive lines, and he who surrenders all other interest and illuminating pursuits to the attainment of a single ambition pays too large a cost. The man who goes into the world with an open mind, and, while possessing a necessary degree of self-confidence is yet wise enough to realize how little he really knows and how very much there is to be learned, is the man who, as a rule, packs his life full with varied interests that bring with the widest knowledge of men and things.
